Le Page Effemine was published in three copiously illustrated volumes. The title means "the feminized page-boy," and throughout the story the stress is on a boy completely in the control of a sadistic woman who does not put him in dresses or complete feminine costume but keeps him in highly sissified male garb with many feminine elements, such as corseting and the inevitable high heels and long gloves. The preference here is not to transform the boy into a girl and make him enjoy the transformation; rather, it is to humiliate the boy and to keep him constantly aware of his humiliation. Most of the story takes place in the Curle estate and we meet several familiar characters
