This is the story of two people, John Parker, a wealthy plantation owner, and Samuel, a young slave who has endeared himself to his master. Samuel begins a new life at age sixteen when he is unexpectedly given his freedom.

The story begins in 1831 in Southhampton County, Virginia, with the Nat Turner rebellion, and spans the next twenty-five years as slave and slaveowner alike live out their daily lives in endless inequality.

Samuel travels to Baltimore, a city that welcomes freed slaves, where eventually he and his former master become unlikely partners in a lucrative business venture that forever entwines the two men.

A mysterious light in the river is woven throughout the story as both Parker and Samuel deal with the changing times leading up to the War Between the States.
